What aspects of the UI Interface did you like the most? *

The UI of the game is very polished, character selection menu is pleasingly designed and has a nice layout with buttons. Other parts of the UI like the the inventory book panel and the UI bar have a clean aesthetic and are easy to use.

What aspects of the UI Interface did you not like? *

Sound effects can be added to the UI bar and shop panels like sounds while buying items and creating potions.

What features & functionalities of the game did you like the most? *

The character selection menu has a nice UI and right when you select your player, you enter the game in an island with an amazing layout of all the icons on the bottom. The UI Bar looks interesting and aesthetic and so does the inventory book panel

What features & functionalities of the game did you not like? *

The character movement could use a little work currently going left or right causes the player to spin in the same place a couple of times. Because of the movement issues the camera is also a bit glitchy, but it should improve along with the movement of the player.

Would you like to be a part of the playtest for the prototype with enemies?

What aspects of the UI Interface did you like the most? *

UI interface looks great overall. The elements have a nice colour scheme. The sky used for the game is my favourite part of all, really admire that.

What aspects of the UI Interface did you not like? *

Pickup items could be moved around the island to make the game more strategic and make it a bit difficult for the players to find those items to create potions.

What features & functionalities of the game did you like the most? *

Creating potions seems like a fun way to make the game more interactive, and then using those potions to use as magic spells feels like a job done successfully, this gives the player a good satisfaction.

What features & functionalities of the game did you not like? *

The free camera is a bit annoying specially when the player's is moving around inside a house. Both the player's movement and the camera need to be modified to make the game better.
